

Smart Tips for Cookie Favor Counts

1. How to Determine the Right Number of Wedding Favors

The easiest way to estimate how many favors you'll need is to start with your guest list. Then, account for unexpected guests and any last-minute changes. Finally, consider special groups and additional recipients to ensure everyone is accommodated.

2. Ordering Cookie Favors Online

Ordering wedding cookies online? Sweet choice—literally. If you're setting up a cookie bar where guests can grab what they like, plan for at least 2-3 cookies per person—because, let's be honest, no one stops at just one. A variety of flavors means guests can sample different treats, but it also means some will double-dip.

3. Common Wedding Favor Mistakes to Avoid

Even the best-laid wedding plans can go a little sideways—especially when it comes to favors. Order well in advance if you plan to buy cookies online for wedding favors. Most cookie delivery companies need at least 2-3 weeks' notice, and custom designs might require even more time.

4. Wrapping Up Your Favors

By planning for your guest count, setting aside a few extras for the VIPs (like your wedding party and vendors), and ordering ahead of time, you'll ensure your favors are both thoughtful and stress-free. And if cookies are your favor of choice, timing is everything—order early so they arrive fresh, delicious, and ready to impress.
